How to draw a cute dog easy video

Joanne Bourne/Flickr Dogs and cats are from different species of animals, appealing to different types of people. Both have provided services and companionship to humans for many centuries. Even though each species has its own distinct looks and characteristics, they do have some common traits as well. Exploring them will give you a more in-depth look as to what each type of animal has to offer.Body Design While there are definite differences between the look of dogs and cats, each carry similar body designs. From the need to carry themselves using four legs to the tail that each is born with, their body design helps them carry out their natural instincts for surviving in the world. Some dog and cat breeds have been modified through breeding practices humans have implemented throughout the years. However, each of these species of animals was originally intended to have certain physical characteristics to protect them from things such as their environment and predators. For example, most breeds of both dogs and cats have fur to cover them and keep their skin safe from hot and cold weather in which they live. Cats and dogs have claws designed into their paws to give them tools for hunting and fighting off predators. However, some breeds are now found without these natural features due to artificial genetic engineering. Survival Instincts It is the basic instinct for all living things to seek out food when they are hungry. This is no different between dogs and cats. When necessary, these different species of animals will hunt for their food if needed. Most domesticated animals will find ways of communicating their time of hunger with their owners. However, if left in the wild or on their own, these animals will find the prey necessary to feed on. Both dogs and cats are carnivorous animals. This means that they need meat for iron, protein, and nutritional supplements to survive. They will consume smaller animals or fish to fulfill their dietary needs. Territorialism Dogs and cats will protect their territory. For domesticated animals, this is often their home and the people they see within their pack. While cats tend to be more isolated with their territory, dogs tend to gravitate to other dogs to form a full pack. Each of these animals understands who their predators are, allowing them to defend their territories as needed. Need for Affection While each animal has its own way of showing their need for affection, both dogs and cats have a natural need for receiving this type of attention. Cats tend to burrow into their owners or other animals while dogs tend to be more vocal about their need for affection. Both species of animals need praise. For dogs, this may be found in simple acts, such as doing something on command. One common way in which cats seek praise is through their hunting instincts. For example, it is not uncommon for a cat to hunt a mouse or other type of rodent. Even if they are not hungry, the cat will drop the dead rodent at the feet of their human companion, seeking out praise for their services. Body Language Dogs and cats have a certain body language that they display. When content, the animal can often be found curled up in a resting position. However, if the animal feels threatened, you will see characteristics such as a tenseness between their shoulders, tucked tails, and tufts of fur sticking up along their back. MORE FROM REFERENCE.COM Score: 0% Rank: Correct Answer: Start Quiz >> Photo Courtesy: Fran/Pixabay Man's best friend has a funny way of communicating sometimes, but almost everything your dog does has meaning. From barking to whining, jumping to butt scooting, your dog's actions are something you should pay close attention to. Learning about your dog's behavior is one of the best ways you can care for your four-legged pal. While most things your pup does are nothing to worry about, noticing the signs and symptoms that something may be wrong are very important.The Play BowA play bow is when your pup is crouched down in the front with his backside up in the air. The position usually signifies that your four-legged friend wants to play, and it allows your pet to run quickly at a moment's notice. Photo Courtesy: 947051/Pixabay A play bow invites another dog or a human to interact and, as the name suggests, play. While a dog may growl or bark while in the play bow position, the pup's body language is meant to show you that it just wants to have some fun.DiggingIt's no secret that dogs love to dig. Some want to dig in the dirt to try and find a buried treasure, and some dig just because they're bored. While digging is usually not harmful to a pup, you may want to deter your dog from doing so because your pet may get dirty or start digging in places that are off limits — like your garden. Photo Courtesy: 689063/Pixabay Many canine professionals will tell you that a dog that digs is one that needs to get some additional exercise. If you have a digger in your clan, spend some more time playing fetch.CheewingIf your dog is chewing on just about everything in sight, chances are that the animal is having an issue with its teeth. Puppies chew when they are teething, so it's important to make sure you have plenty of toys available, including bones and other teething-specific toys. Photo Courtesy: Mell1670/Pixabay Even older dogs enjoy chewing — it's just part of being a dog. However, if you don't provide discipline early on, you may find some of your belongings completely destroyed. Make sure you introduce plenty of chewing options, and be stern when it comes to deterring your pup from chewing on things like the furniture.BeggingYou may notice your dog hanging around the dinner table looking all kinds of desperate for a taste of human food, but you should resist. Dogs that are given a taste of food from the table will almost always beg for more. They may begin to whine or bark while looking anxiously up at the table. Photo Courtesy: Kapa65/Pixabay If the begging is getting out of hand, you may want to crate your pup or put it outside until the meal is over. However, it's best to avoid this altogether by not offering any table food in the first place.Pulling on the LeashA dog that pulls on the leash while on a walk needs training. The behavior is usually caused by a dog being over-excited for a walk. Getting exercise shouldn't be a stressful event for you or your dog, so this behavior needs to be squashed as soon as possible. Photo Courtesy: MabelAmber/Pixabay The best way to do this is by keeping the leash short but loose. When your dog pulls and the leash goes tight, you should stop walking. Your dog should also stop once it realizes you're not moving. Make sure you use positive reinforcement by way of treats.WhiningA dog's whine can mean a few different things. Most of the time, a whining dog just wants your attention. If your dog starts whining and you immediately give the animal attention, however, you are demonstrating that whining will get your pet that attention. You should avoid doing this and only give your dog attention when it is not whining. Photo Courtesy: ivanovgood/Pixabay A dog that is in pain may also whine, so it's important to make sure you pay attention to your dog. If you notice any other signs of pain, a trip to the vet may be in order.Separation AnxietyIf your dog gets upset when you leave, it probably has separation anxiety. Since you are your dog's whole life, it is important to teach your pet that you aren't gone forever and will come back. Photo Courtesy: Pitsch/Pixabay In the event this is happening to your dog, you may want to try leaving for shorter periods of time, working up to longer times away. Sometimes leaving the television or radio on while you are gone can help as it makes it seem like people are talking in the house. Overall, this is very common and not a cause for concern.Barking at the DoorA dog that barks at the door may want to go outside. To avoid a potty accident, you should take your dog outside. Dogs may also bark at the door if they want to go outside to play, in which case you could appease your pup and go for a run. Photo Courtesy: olliebrands0/Pixabay Dogs also bark at the door if they sense that someone is outside. This can be an excellent way for a dog to alarm you that company has arrived. If the barking is excessive, you may want to talk to your vet.JumpingDogs and jumping often go hand-in-hand. Dogs jump when they are happy, mainly because they are excited to greet another being. However, jumping is often frowned upon because a lot of people — especially strangers — do not want to be greeted with such enthusiasm. Photo Courtesy: MishuHanda/Pixabay To keep your dog from jumping, be sure not to give the animal attention unless all four paws are on the ground. You may also tell your pup to sit before allowing someone to come over and pet it. These things can significantly help control your pup's excitement, making meet and greets far more enjoyable for everyone.BitingBiting is how dogs protect themselves. No matter how calm a dog's disposition is, a moment of aggression or fear can turn ugly quick. A dog that bites likely feels threatened or nervous. Ideally, these feelings should be faced head-on from a young age. Photo Courtesy: ElfinFox/Pixabay Dogs should be socialized in a comfortable setting where they do not feel intimidated. Frequent trips to a dog park or pet store help with adjusting to new scents and making friends. It's important not to put your dog in any situation where the animal feels unsafe to keep potential biting at bay.Excessive BarkingA barking dog is inevitable since that's how canines communicate. But what happens when your dog barks excessively? Your dog could be experiencing anything from frustration to aggression to a desire to play. Photo Courtesy: birgl/Pixabay Excessive barking can be annoying. Once you determine that there is nothing wrong, you can work to correct this behavior. If a dog barks excessively, the animal is trying to tell you something, but perhaps not in the most convenient way. Obedience training can help. Being consistent in training is vital, as a dog will learn to pick up on whatever cues you offer it.Butt ScooffYour dog is scooting his butt across the carpet, there could be a multitude of things going on. A dog may drag its behind if it's itchy or something is stuck there. In these instances, there's nothing to worry about. Photo Courtesy: JACLOU-DL/Pixabay A dog may also scoot his butt if there's something more serious going on. This could signify that your dog has worms or anal gland issues. If the behavior continues, you should call your vet. If you suspect your dog's anal glands are the issue, your groomer should be able to help.Growing and Baring TeethWhen dogs bare their teeth and growl, they are showing aggression. Your dog may express these feelings toward another dog or a human. Whatever the source, you should keep your dog away from whatever the animal is fixated on. You should not allow your dog to approach another animal or human if this behavior is present. Photo Courtesy: christels/Pixabay While you can try to calm your dog by providing a distraction or speaking in a soothing tone, it's important that you are careful as well. If you interfere at the wrong time, you could get bitten.HowlingIf your pooch hears something high-pitched, like a train whistle, it may try to match the sound by howling. This may be because the sound annoys the dog or hurts the animal's ears. Photo Courtesy: dahancoo/Pixabay It's also possible that your dog is trying to express itself in a different way. Some dogs howl when they are sad or lonely, which can be absolutely heartbreaking. Some dogs howl to mimic humans, like when they are singing or laughing.Low GrowlA dog may express a low growl if it hears something but is unsure what it is. You may notice that your dog low growls while looking out the window. Perhaps the animal sees something but is not quite sure if it's a threat or not. Photo Courtesy: Whicherg/Pixabay A low growl may also signify that your dog is anxious or fearful. You should speak to your pup in an upbeat tone and try to distract it from whatever is causing anxiety. Try to encourage your pet or even as it to do some tricks to take the pup's mind off of the fear.SupermanA dog gets in the Superman position when it is completely tucked out but very comfortable. The Superman pose is apparent as the animal has its front paws stretched out and back paws sprawled straight back. The position is seen in dogs of all ages, but it's most often seen in puppies. Photo Courtesy: StockSnap/Pixabay A dog sleeping in the Superman position isn't on high alert and is totally relaxed. It's difficult for a dog to be on guard when laying like this, so you know you have one super tired, super chill pup if you find your dog sleeping in this position.Giving GiftsDogs bring gifts to their owners as a way to show affection. Your dog is trying to make you happy by bringing you something special. Most of the time, the dog will bring something from around the house, like your slippers or a favorite toy. However, sometimes you aren't lucky and your dog brings you a dead animal, such as a mouse. Photo Courtesy: 7138475/Pixabay Sure, this isn't ideal, but the sentiment is still positive. Your dog wants you to know that it loves you and is loyal. Your pet wants nothing more than to make you proud.LickingLicking is a dog's love language. Your four-legged bestie may shower you with kisses as a way to show you're its favorite. A dog kissing session can last a long time if you allow it, and it can be a daily occurrence. There's nothing wrong with a dog showing affection, although some people get grossed out by it. Photo Courtesy: skeeze/Pixabay Your dog may take every opportunity to kiss you on the hand, arm, face and even your mouth. Your dog's love has no boundaries, so if you'd prefer to skip the mouth licks, you'll have to pull away.Licking or Biting PawsWhile licking a human to show love is a beautiful thing, a dog who licks his own paws could be experiencing something that requires a trip to the vet. A dog that licks its paws after eating may be experiencing a food allergy. Alternatively, a dog that licks or bites its paws on a regular basis could be experiencing anxiety. Photo Courtesy: LUMN/Pixabay It's essential to pay attention to when your dog licks its paws and report that information to your vet. Excessive licking can cause wounds, and that could lead to an infection, so do not take paw licking lightly.SneezingDogs sneeze due to irritants inhaled into their noses, not unlike humans. They can also sneeze from allergies caused by grass and pollen. While most sneezing in canines is nothing to worry about, a dog that sneezes excessively or with discharge could require a visit to the vet. Photo Courtesy: Huskyherz/Pixabay For example, nasal mites cause sneezing and some unpleasant nasal discharge. Mites are contagious and can be transmitted from dog to dog, so it's important to get your pup checked out as soon as possible if you think there's something else going on.Head TiltingJust about everyone knows all about the dog head tilt that will undoubtedly melt your heart. Have you noticed that when you talk to your dog, it looks right at you and tilts its head? This is the animal being curious. Dogs tilt their heads as a way to adjust their outer ears so that they can hear you better. Photo Courtesy: Vizslafotozas/Pixabay A dog that tilts its head while you talk is hanging onto every word coming out of your mouth. Your pet is attentive and wants to know if you have anything to say — especially if it involves a trip to the park!Butt SniffingWhile most of the things that dogs do are cute, there are a couple that simply aren't. You may even say they're gross. That brings us to the butt sniff. If your dog meets another dog and immediately sniffs its butt, this is totally normal. Photo Courtesy: Alexas Fotos/Pixabay A butt sniff is the equivalent of a human shaking another human's hand. Your dog is trying to get to know another dog — or a human. Yes, dogs sometimes sniff human butts, too.Chasing Their TailAh, the tail chase. A favorite pastime of so many doggos. Dogs chase their tails for a variety of reasons, but most of the time, it is all in good fun. A puppy may chase its tail because it doesn't realize it's attached to the dog's own body. An older dog may chase its tail just because the animal is goofy and being playful. Photo Courtesy: stux/Pixabay However, this also happens when something else going on. It's possible that your dog has fleas needs its anal glands checked and examined, especially if tail chasing is a frequent occurrence.Eating GrassDoes your dog eat grass whenever it's outside? While this behavior is normal, it is a cause for concern. Most of the time, a dog eats grass for one of two reasons. Your pet is either missing a specific nutrient in its diet or trying to make itself vomit. The worst-case scenario? The dog has intestinal worms. Photo Courtesy: MAKY OREL/Pixabay No matter what the reason may be, eating grass is not a good thing. You should talk to your vet about your pup's diet and overall health if the dog is eating grass every time you go for a walk.Eating FecesA dog that eats its own feces is most likely on a medication that isn't digesting properly. If this medication comes out in the dog's stool, the animal may be enticed to gobble it back up, which is nothing short of gross. Photo Courtesy: Katrina S/Pixabay Some mother dogs eat their puppies' feces in an effort to keep the babies clean. While eating feces isn't considered harmful (unless your dog has worms), you should deter your dog from doing this. If you are outside, pick up your dog's poop right away. If your dog uses a pad, try to distract the animal right after it poops.HumpingDog humping isn't usually a cause for concern. Some dogs mount or hump in a sexual manner even after being neutered or spayed. Dogs instinctively practice the behavior, especially if they are unaltered. Dogs may also hump as a way of flirting. Photo Courtesy: ArtTower/Pixabay While some people think that dog humping is a sign of hormones, this behavior is often a way of exerting dominance. Your dog may hump another dog, a human or even a toy, but it's usually nothing to be concerned about, even if it is super embarrassing.Sitting or Sleeping on Your FeetDo you ever notice that your dog is continually touching you? Whether your pet is lying right next to you or cozing up at your feet, this is entirely normal behavior. The dog not only wants you to know that it's there, but it also wants to make sure it knows if you leave. By resting on your feet, the dog will be forced to wake up if you get up from your seat. Photo Courtesy: PublicDomainPictures/Pixabay A dog resting on your feet may also be a way to mark her territory. You are the dog's human, and the animal wants everyone to be clear on that.Raising a Single PawDogs are very intelligent creatures, and they try to communicate however they can. If your dog raises a single paw in your presence, it could be requesting your attention. Nine times out of 10, your dog does this to let you know that it wants to play. Photo Courtesy: YamaBSM/Pixabay However, your dog may also raise its paw because it wants you to pet it. You'll know this because the animal will likely put that raised paw on your arm. The moment you stop petting, the paw will pop up again. Your pet may also do this to let you know that it's hungry.Barking or Moving Paws While SleepingA dog that moves its paws or barks in its sleep is most likely having a vivid dream. If your dog is laying on its side and its feet are moving, the animal is likely dreaming about chasing a bunny rabbit through a field or something similarly exciting. Photo Courtesy: vivros62/Pixabay Most of the time, a dreaming dog is nothing to worry about. If you notice that your dog's stature is more rigid, however, it's possible that it's having a seizure. If you are worried, gently try to wake the dog up. Dogs can be roused relatively easily from a deep sleep, but do not wake them up if you think they're having a seizure.YawningYawning isn't a behavior that is hard to figure out. Like humans, dogs yawn when they are tired. Dog yawns tend to be extremely cute and can even be highlighted with a bit of a bark. Dogs may also yawn if you yawn, which further proves the theory that yawning is contagious. Photo Courtesy: JACLOU-DL/Pixabay There isn't too much to worry about when your pooch lets out a big yawn. It may be time to let the dog chill for a bit and catch up on some much-needed shuteye. Being a dog is just so ruff. See what we did there? MORE FROM FAQTOIDS.COM
